JAPS GAINED RUSSIAN MOAT

Desperate Underground Fighting Gives Galleries to Mikado's Troops.

MAKE ATTACK ON EASTERN RIDGE

Possession of Keekwan Fort Would Give the Japanese the Key to the Whole Situation at Present.

Headquarters, Third Japanese Army, in the Field Before Port Arthur, via Fusan, Nov. 15.—The Japanese gained the moats of the principal fort as assailed by a general attack on the eastern fortified ridge on Oct. 30.

These were wider, deeper and stronger than had been supposed, and were defended by emplacements or galleries, running north of the Keekwan fort. The garrisons were captured after desperate fighting under ground.

The Russians still hold parts of the moats, but the Japanese are engaged in sapping to dislodge them, after which the capture of the forts should be easy.

The Japanese side

in this campaign were 2,000. The casualties in the attack of the Japanese on the eastern fortified ridge on Oct. 30 were 1,500. It was an unsuccessful assault. The powerful east Keekwan fort was gained, but the Russians were reinforced and drove the Japanese down to the foot of the hill.

The Japanese are now sapping toward the crest of the hill. The capture of this fort would give the Japanese the key to the eastern fortified ridge, as artillery mounted there would dominate the forts in front of the ridge and enable the Japanese to place infantry in a position to sweep up the ridge.

Report Made to Women's Suffrage Convention Exposes a Shameful Slight.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—The jury in the case of Victor Roland O'Shea, charged with the murder of his young bride of two years ago, reported today they had disagreed. O'Shea is a law office student of his father, a prominent Chicago attorney. He eloped with Amy Hogenson, a daughter of a wealthy man. O'Shea was unable to support his wife, who left him and went home. He went to the house and shot his wife and then attempted suicide. The defense was a plea of temporary insanity.

Mrs. Gardner of Platteville, chairman of the executive committee, reported that circulars asking for planks in favor of women's suffrage had been sent to all the delegates and alternates to both the republican and democratic state conventions but that the parties had paid no attention to them apparently.

Lawyers Invited

Rev. R. M. Vaughan opened the afternoon session with a prayer and a short address was delivered by Rev. Olympia Brown of Columbus. The discussion of the question "Why Women Should or Should Not Have the Ballot" was opened by Mrs. Nellie Laughton. All of the lawyers of the city were invited to be present and participate in this discussion, but Atty. Angie King was the only one who responded.

Attorney King Speaks

Rev. Olympia Brown who presided at the session said that she had made a personal call on all of the attorneys of the city and questioned them on their attitude towards women's suffrage. Almost without exception they were opposed to it but gave various excuses for not attending the debate this afternoon and defending their stand. Miss Taylor of Brodhead delivered a very interesting reading and the debate on the question before the house was commenced. Attorney Angie King made a strong plea for the suffrage. She said she did not believe in "women's rights" but human rights. There should not be two codes for men and women. She thought that women would exert a beneficial influence on politics. Two-thirds of the paupers which women had to help support, she said, were men. The argument was put forward that if women voted they would have to fight. Some of the best fighters the world had known were women. Life was a fight at best—a fight against intemperance and other wrongs for women as well as men.

LABOR LEADERS ARE AT FRISCO

President Gompers Delivers His Annual Message to the Workingmen.

HE FAVERS AUTOMONY OF TRADES

Declares That the American Federation of Labor Has Gained Its Present Position by Strictness.

(Special by Scripps-McRae.)

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 15.—More than 400 delegates, representing 1,750,000 workers, met Monday in Lyric Hall in the twenty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The convention was called to order by J. O. Walsh, president of the San Francisco Labor council, who welcomed the delegates to the city.

A number of Socialists are present as delegates and they have the usual number of resolutions declaring for the nationalization of the means of production, distribution and exchange, but, according to the leaders, the resolutions will meet with the defeat met with at former conventions.

Urge Trades Autonomy.

On the question of Industrialism versus trades autonomy, President Gompers in his annual address counseled the delegates to adhere to the policy of trades autonomy on which the American Federation of Labor has been built up to its present proportions.

John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, is the leader of the industrialists.

The report of President Gompers contains 18,000 words and touches on all the principal questions before the trade unionists to-day.

In speaking against Industrialism the report refers to "some of our mistaken trade unionists who, with more enthusiasm than clearness of vision, urge what they euphoniously call an industrial form of organization. May the day never come when, by an attempt at overrunning, we miss our goal, and, rent asunder, weak and helpless, become the victims of the cupidity and rapacity of labor's foes."

Another Industrial War.

In advocating joint trade agreements with employers as the best hope for maintaining industrial peace Mr. Gompers says:

"We would abolish war, industrially as well as internationally; but its abolition must come, and it will come from conscious power, intelligent and broader humanity. May the day never come when peace is proclaimed or maintained because of the inaction of the workers. Peace, to be desirable, to be lasting, advantageous and humane, must come from a virile and intelligent manhood. We want no peace, and there never will be peace, founded upon the servility and degradation of the workers."

AWFUL FIRE IN STOCK YARDS, NEW YORK TODAY

United States Stock Yards Burned, and Thousands of Animals Were Roasted

To Death.

(Special by Scripps-McRae.)

New York, Nov. 15.—Fire in the United States stockyards at the foot of Sixth street, Jersey City, early today burned to death twenty-five hundred dogs, roasted thirty-two hundred carcasses in cold storage, and caused thirty-five hundred head of cattle, sheep and hogs to stampede, and destroyed much valuable property. The fire started in the cold storage room, as the result of an explosion of the ammonia tank.

At the smell of smoke the cattle and sheep stampeded, breaking through the wooden enclosures. They were finally rounded up. The loss is a hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

University Sociological Trip.

The classes in sociology at the University of Wisconsin, under the direction of Mr. Jerome Dowd, lectures in sociology are spending five days this week visiting the social settlements and the institutions for dependent and delinquent classes in Milwaukee and Chicago. In Milwaukee, the party which consists of 37 students, spent some time at the University of Wisconsin, the social settlement of which Rev. H. H. Jacobs, a graduate of the university in the class of '93, is warden; and in Chicago, they will visit the Chicago Commons, Hull House, the important penal and charitable institutions, and the ethnological exhibit at the Field Columbian Museum.

Prominent Georgians to Visit the University.

An official party from the state of Georgia and the University of Georgia, including Gov. J. M. Terrell and nine members of the legislature, and fifteen members of the board of trustees and faculty of the University of Georgia, will visit the University of Wisconsin as guests of the board of regents and faculty on November 20 and 21. The party which will number thirty-nine, will come to Madison direct in a special train, and will be entertained with a drive about the city, a reception, a luncheon, and a special convocation of the students, will be held to be addressed by Governor Terrell and Chancellor Hill. It is regarded as significant that these representatives of the University of Georgia which is the oldest American university, having recently celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of its establishment, should have selected the University of Wisconsin as the representative northern state university which they desired to visit and inspect.

Great Historian to Lecture at the University.

A faceted little noted in the furor of speculation was the continuation of the famous Northern Securities litigation in the United States court of appeals on Wednesday. It is now expected, in well informed quarters, that this case will drag along until carried to the highest court for final settlement, and the many reports of compromise agreements between the parties interested are merely put out for stock market effect. It is true that the retirement of the Oregon Short Line is still going a long way toward solving the trusteeship feature of the case.

The features of note in the industrial list were the coal and iron stocks, as well as the steel issues, traction, with its conservative tariff policies, means much to the iron and the success of the present administration, with it was but natural to see heavy advances scored in these issues. London took an active part in the advance and sentiment was most pronounced in foreign capitals that our outlook for the coming four years was most brilliant.

The new Japanese 6 per cent. loan of $60,000,000 is coming on the market at a most opportune time, while the public thirst aroused for investment securities the placing of the second issue of the Japanese government could be accomplished without difficulty. The bonds will be issued at a price netting the buyer about 7.12 per cent. These bonds are a second charge upon the Japanese customs, the prior loan leaving an ample margin for that purpose. The only uncertain factor is whether the present war with Russia may not be prolonged to such an extent as to seriously cripple the volume of Japanese diplomatic inquiries regarding intervention and it would surprise no one if America should step in and bring about an end to the war.

The strength of the steel securities logically reflects the vastly improved outlook in the iron and steel trade. The heaviness of the stocks of our local traction companies was a feature of the week. As applied to Metropolitan the cause may be in the operation of the subway. Certainly until the final assessment is called upon Metropolitan securities this issue will rule heavy.

Many Pursue Advanced Study.

There are 116 graduates of the university and other colleges and universities in all arts of the country, who are pursuing advanced study in the Graduate School of the University of Wisconsin this year, an increase of 21 over the number last year. Of these, 20 graduates are candidates for the highest academic degree, that of doctor of philosophy; and 44 are seeking the master's degree.

ROOSEVELT HAS SETTLED TRADE

His Election Has Made the National Market Stable and Firm.

New York, November 11, 1904.—The overwhelming endorsement which the people of the United States gave the present administration in Washington, on Tuesday, has created a feeling of profound satisfaction among financial and business interests. The "Stand Patters" have won and this means a continuance of good times with no political interference with tariff or money problems.

President Roosevelt will have many intricate and perplexing problems to unravel in the coming four years, many problems referring to the advancement of our trade and foreign relations. The construction of the Panama canal will be of far-reaching value to the world's trade and commerce—from a business point of view, the most important.

The stock market began to discount the election of Roosevelt some months back, and the final cap stone was placed upon the bull market or the fall of 1904 by the spectacular jump in prices which occurred the day following the election. The price movement was indicated by a quiet absorption of stocks on Saturday and Monday. It broadened Wednesday and Thursday, with every indication of a public activity in the market. The opening prices on Wednesday showed the presence of an active interest bidding up prices and shorts had hoped against hope for a miraculous change in the political tidal wave gave up in despair. Against this buying there were extensive profit-realizing sales on the part of traders who had taken on stocks over the holiday as a wager on the result of the election. After the tremendous profit-taking had been absorbed and the country began to realize the profound endorsement of Roosevelt, with a continuous piling up of pluralities, a new buying force set in which carried prices irresistibly higher. The good, bad and indifferent stocks all participated; the favorites of the hour, along with long-forgotten leaders of the past, kept uniform step in the upward march of prices.

The wave of enthusiasm seemed to spread itself on Thursday morning, but while the specialties were being bid up, heavy realization went on in the Steels, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul, and various others which have been active in the manipulation of the past few days. Thursday afternoon saw the whole list feeling the effect of heavy selling with losses extending over the active list. The reaction brought about by the selling of big interests, who do not welcome a run-away market, just now, is a most favorable sign. While the boom times of 1901 are not looked for, an active and broad speculation, with healthy reaction, is expected to occur this winter. An excellent trading market will be welcomed by the speculative public.

A fact little noted in the furor of speculation was the continuation of the famous Northern Securities litigation in the United States court of appeals on Wednesday. It is now expected, in well informed quarters, that this case will drag along until carried to the highest court for final settlement, and the many reports of compromise agreements between the parties interested are merely put out for stock market effect. THE CANAL ZONE AS IT APPEARS

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM MARY HUMPHREY, AT COLON.

THE TOWN AND COUNTRY

Janesville Woman Writes Very Interestingly of Existing Conditions.

(By Mary Humphrey.)

Aucon, Oct. 30, 1904.—A description of Colon and of the Canal Zone, Colon, the eastern terminus of the Canal Zone and of the Panama railroad, stretches out for perhaps a mile along the seashore and not to the natives who are not natives in truth, but Jamaica negroes. There are very few Spaniards in Colon. Everyone speaks English so we do not find it difficult to get on with no knowledge of Spanish. There are no walls, except in front of the shops. Ladies seldom walk on this account. The custom is to hire a carriage whenever one wants to go out. As it costs twenty-five cents to go over town and the same to return it is rather expensive to make many trips a week and one feels sorry for the poor, little, forlorn skeletons that furnish the propelling power for these two-seated carriages. In the States we would call them ponies, they are so small but here they bear the more dignified term of horses.

The Hospital.

The hospital at Colon is located in the extreme end of the town (the opposite end from the French quarter). It is impossible to give directions down here; a glance at the map will explain why. It is built over the sea but inside the line of the breakers. Both this hospital and the one at Aucon were taken by the government from the Catholic Sisters who had had the charge of them for years. The government is putting them in repair as fast as possible and adding to them as the needs of the work demand. There is very little sickness at Colon so the hospital demands are small. Thirty patients is about the worst they have had thus far. There are four nurses there. As most of the patients are colored people who are taken care of by the ward attendants, the nurses there have very little to do as yet.

A Railway Ride.

The railway trip from Colon to Panama was full of interest although attended with some discomforts. The train was an accommodation, as all the trains are here. There are no distinctly passenger trains, they are all mixed passenger and freight. The first class car is no better furnished than the smoker in the states and it is nothing but a smoker, for all the men smoke ad libitum, and the women, too, if they choose.

Twelve Stations.

There are ten or twelve stations along the route but no one announces them. The conductor is an American but the rest of the train crew are colored. They do not have the air brakes, so the brakeman keeps himself busy at the brake most of the time.

The Route.

The route of the railroad is in the valleys which are nothing but swamps. It is through these valleys that the canal is to go. There is a thick tropical growth of vegetation which must be cleared away and the swamps drained before the real construction can begin. To look at it now it seems impossible to accomplish it. To describe the tropical vegetation is not within my power. It must be seen to gain any accurate idea of it, as we have nothing like it in the north. At every station the natives, mostly women and children, were present with large trays of fruit, bananas, apples, some peaches, oranges and grapes, hoping to find customers among the passengers. These trays they balance on their heads and carry them as steadily as we would a hat.

The Animals.

It was a surprise to see the nice sleek-looking cows these natives have and the fine flock of chickens. Many also had goats. Their homes are nothing but shacks built of palm, with the palm leaves for thatching. Most of these are built close to the railroad tracks, frequented on piles so as to be out of the swampy water. This is in preference to building choice. This will improve, too, as the trade warrants them in adding to the stock.

Some Chicanery.

There are quite a number of Chinamen in business running dry goods, groceries and general stores, but the larger part of the shops are run by the natives who are not natives in truth, but Jamaica negroes. There are very few Spaniards in Colon. Everyone speaks English so we do not find it difficult to get on with no knowledge of Spanish. There are no walls, except in front of the shops. Ladies seldom walk on this account. The custom is to hire a carriage whenever one wants to go out. This is in preference to building some feet back on the hillside away from the swamp.

A description of Ancón, the site of the hospital at Panama, and of Panama will constitute the substance of my next letter.

Some Chicanery.

There are quite a number of Chinamen in business running dry goods, groceries and general stores, but the larger part of the shops are run by the natives who are not natives in truth, but Jamaica negroes. There are very few Spaniards in Colon. Everyone speaks English so we do not find it difficult to get on with no knowledge of Spanish. There are no walls, except in front of the shops. Ladies seldom walk on this account. The custom is to hire a carriage whenever one wants to go out. As it costs twenty-five cents to go over town and the same to return it is rather expensive to make many trips a week and one feels sorry for the poor, little, forlorn skeletons that furnish the propelling power for these two-seated carriages. In the States we would call them ponies, they are so small but here they bear the more dignified term of horses.

The Hospital.

The hospital at Colon is located in the extreme end of the town (the opposite end from the French quarter). It is impossible to give directions down here; a glance at the map will explain why. It is built over the sea but inside the line of the breakers. Both this hospital and the one at Aucon were taken by the government from the Catholic Sisters who had had the charge of them for years. The government is putting them in repair as fast as possible and adding to them as the needs of the work demand. There is very little sickness at Colon so the hospital demands are small. Thirty patients is about the worst they have had thus far. There are four nurses there. As most of the patients are colored people who are taken care of by the ward attendants, the nurses there have very little to do as yet.

A Railway Ride.

The railway trip from Colon to Panama was full of interest although attended with some discomforts. The train was an accommodation, as all the trains are here. There are no distinctly passenger trains, they are all mixed passenger and freight. The first class car is no better furnished than the smoker in the states and it is nothing but a smoker, for all the men smoke ad libitum, and the women, too, if they choose.

Twelve Stations.

There are ten or twelve stations along the Coming Attractions.

The big musical comedy event of the season will be the coming engagement of Thomas Q. Seabrook in Harry B. Smith and Gustave Kerker's spectacular musical comedy novelty, "The Billionaire," at the Myers Grand Friday evening. The organization is composed of 100 people and is under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger.

"The Billionaire" is described as of the performance the illusion is so has invented many humorous schemes for spending money in this creation of "John Doe," among them the building of a theatre in which the manager employs his own audience. The scene of the second act showing the auditorium of a theatre, is said to be the most realistic presented on the stage in many years. When the curtain rises on this part a very clever satire on the new fat perfect that the auditor seems to be of the phenomenally wealthy man--that it is a disgrace to the rich and rare for four months with phenomenal success at Daly's Theatre, New York, last season. The piece is presented in two acts with scenes which show respectively the exterior of a hotel in New York at carnival time, and the lobby and auditorium of a theatre in New York City. As a production it is said to be gorgeously magnificent. Thomas Q. Seabrook plays the part of John Doe, an American millionaire, who burns money. Mr. Smith looking into another fully equipped theatre, complete in every detail of stage, scenery, boxes, aisle and seats crowded with spectators. This scene and its incidental satire and burlesque of familiar sights and characters of a first-night audience in New York is the greatest theatrical novelty the present season is likely to see. "The Billionaire" is to be presented with the original production from Daly's Theatre.

Diamond Donner and Thomas Q. Seabrook with "The Billionaire"

The sale of seats opens tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

PHYSICIANS EVERYWHERE

Know the Value of Pyramid Pile Cure.

"Gratitude alone prompts me to testify to the efficacy of Pyramid Pile Cure. Last March I bought a dollar package at the drug store, which cured me of bleeding piles, and I was a sufferer from them for eight years; but I had not been troubled with them since last September, when I had a very severe case of protruding piles, which a trained nurse said was the worst case she ever saw, and my doctors told me to get Pyramid Pile Cure again, which I did and was completely cured in three days. I have not had piles of any kind since, and it is all owing to this wonderful remedy. My nurse took a look, which I was glad to be able to give her, for I know she will be able to help lots of suffering people whom I could never see or know."

"I recommend 'Pyramid' wherever I know of any one suffering as I did. It gave me great pleasure to be able to say I am entirely cured, which my doctor says is true. I say God bless Pyramid Pile Cure." From a former great sufferer, Mrs. F. S. Abbott, 1206 Unity St., Frankford, Philadelphia, Pa.

This remedy, which is sold by druggists generally in fifty cent and dollar packages, is in a suppository form, is applied directly to the parts affected and performs its work quietly and painlessly. Its value is evidenced by the testimony given above and we urge all sufferers to buy a package now and give it a trial tonight. Accept no substitutes and remember that there is no remedy just as good." A little book on the Cause and Cure of Piles is published by the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and will be sent free to any address.

MAY INSTALL THE STAFF METHOD OF

Running Trains on the Northwestern

Road--Management Has Expert

Studying System in East.

A committee representing the Railway Signal Association at the recent convention held in St. Louis made two radical recommendations. The first was that the staff system be used on all single track railroads, and the lock and block system on all double-track roads. In view of the fact that there is practically no staff installation in the United States, barring the short mountain division of the Santa Fe and about thirty miles on the Queen and Crescent road, the committee's recommendation may be regarded as somewhat sensational.

NORTHWESTERN EXPERT EXAMINING.

As a result, the management of the Northwestern road has sent a signal expert east to observe and report upon the workings of the system there and should his report favor its adoption the staff system may be installed upon this portion of the road and all other parts where single track is used and the lock and block system be established in all places where double track is laid.

The Burlington road has gone still further toward testing it and the management has set up two staff machines in the general offices in Chicago, which are being interestingly inspected by railway officials of many lines. The company is about to install the system on the Savannah branch, between Stewart and Flag

Center, Ill., a distance of ten miles.

STAFF SYSTEM EXPENSIVE.

The staff system has been used in England almost exclusively for fifty years, and has never been seriously regarded by the American roads, on account of the cost of installation, which is almost twice as great as that of the best automatic block signal system, and may exceed $5,000 a mile. The staff system makes it impossible for a train to enter a block without the engineer coming into possession of a metal bar called a staff, unless he chooses to disregard the stop signal. The machines containing the staffs are electrically

THE ELECTION—ITS MEANING.

The United States has voted overwhlemingly in favor of the present administration, says The Financier. No candidate, or set of candidates, ever received a more positive endorsement. Mr. Roosevelt will begin his second term with the entire machinery of congress under his control, and with the assurance, also, that the people have placed him in charge because they have faith in him. To that extent personality entered into the late campaign, but aside from that the country voted on principle. It repudiated the proposition that the United States should abandon the Philippines; it showed strongly that it preferred a straightforward declaration to an equivocal utterance or rather no utterance, at all, on the currency question—in short, the mass of the voters expressed themselves well satisfied with things as they are.

For the future, therefore, we may expect a continuance of policy not differing materially from that which has already been revealed. The administration will take up the important task of making the Panama canal a reality; it will proceed with the problem of converting the Philippines into an American province, and the foreign program of Secretary of State Hay will be continued without interruption.

To what extent new legislation will be attempted is doubtful. We imagine that late President McKinley's appeal for broadened markets through the revision of current tariff regulations will receive some consideration, although as a matter of fact the administration might accept Tuesday's verdict as an endorsement of the tariff laws as they stand at present. Probably Congress will legislate on the trust question—at least to the extent of defining the powers and limitations of interstate corporations—but as Attorney General Knox stated after the decision on the Northern Securities case, the country will not run amuck. Let it not be forgotten, however, that the administration will never hesitate to institute proceedings in cases where the evidence seems to warrant such action. As for currency legislation, there is little likelihood that anything beyond remedying plain defects in present laws will be undertaken. Currency and politics are now hopelessly separated, so far as issues are concerned.

The average business man accepts the result of Tuesday's election with satisfaction. If only for the reason that a disturbing element has been removed from the path of mercantile progress. The United States now enters on a new era of prosperity, and it behoves the country as a whole, and the administration as well, to see to it that nothing which might interfere with the full development and maintenance of good times is permitted. If the speculative markets can be kept within reasonable bounds the year 1905 ought to be the best in our history, and the succeeding several years not less noteworthy in that particular.

THE REPUBLICAN VICTORY.

Never in the history of the nation has the republican party won such a victory as the one recorded last Tuesday. It was a veritable landslide and the most sanguine were taken off their feet by surprise.

It is fortunate for the country as well as for the party, that the man who occupies the chair of the chief executive is a level-headed man, and while the verdict of the people is a flattering compliment to Theodore Roosevelt, it will not demoralize him.

He will continue to be the president of all the people, and although the congress is top-heavy, the interests of the minority will neither be overlooked nor neglected.

It has been argued that the president gained office through accident, and that but for the death of President McKinley he would never have occupied the exalted position. While it is true that for three and one-half years he has been filling the unexpired term of his predecessor, and has attempted to carry out the policy of the late President McKinley, it is also true that many new propositions have presented themselves for settlement, and he has always been equal to the occasion.

He is today, in a stronger sense than ever before, the people's president elected by popular vote, and by a majority so pronounced that there is no question about the sentiment behind him.

The signal victory of the party was largely due to the confidence which the president inspired and his judgment on all the great questions with which he has had to deal is commended by the people.

President Roosevelt is not a policy man. This fact has been so freely demonstrated that it was long since well established. He possesses strong convictions and the courage to stand by them. This is what the people admire. Much will be expected of him but he has never disappointed them.

The next congress will be so strongly republican that it will be open to all sorts of criticism. There will be danger of extravagance, and careful conservative judgment will be necessary.

The country was never more prosperous than it is today and the outlook for the next four years is very encouraging. The republican party will be equal to any emergencies which may arise.

THE STATE.

A week has passed since the election of Governor La Follette and normal conditions are assuming shape. The men who opposed him vigorously are still citizens of the state. Their interests are here and they will continue to look after them in the past.

It is said the governor that he is a man of destiny. Be that as it may, he is certainly a unique character, possessing consummate skill as a leader. The victory achieved was largely a personal victory and while many object to the theories advanced, they were endorsed by a plurality large enough to render the action significant.

The test of all new legislation is in the trying and the weakness or strength of the primary law will be determined by its use. It remains for the legislature to say whether or not the rate commission and long distance tariff shall be tested. It is hardly reasonable to suppose that a legislative body composed of men from every section of the state can be influenced to act against the best interests of the people and it is safe to assume that careful consideration will precede any radical measures.

The governor will not be handicapped as he was two years ago, and the measure of individual responsibility is therefore increased. It is to be hoped that good judgment will influence him to act wisely.

Janesville is a good town to live in and buy in. The principles of the republican party is protection of home industries and if this is a good policy for a nation it certainly should be for a city.

Farmers will soon find that Janesville is a pretty good place to do more than sell their sugar beets in the roads get finished and they have good places to hold a monthly market.

The social democratic party of Illinois has proved itself a decided factor. In fact all over the country they have demonstrated that they are apt to take the place of the democratic national party.

Business in every part of the country reflores in Roosevelt's election and manufacturers all over the country are making ready for four more years of prosperity.

If anyone wanted to see a sight they should have visited the sugar beet factory this morning and witnessed the hundred teams lined up for delivery of sugar beets.

Those striking cotton mill employees had not been consulted when the mill owners said they would open their mills and but few went back to work.

That Thanksgiving turkey is still strutting around waiting for the butcher and wondering what has happened he is being fed so well.

The talk of organizing a sugar beet industry last spring seemed very chimerical but Mr. Hapke made it a certainty.

Tobacco riders have not yet begun worrying about this year's supply. The crop is reported to be most excellent.

Plenty of sugar beets and a good crop with corn in plenty ought to make Christmas shopping a delight to many people.

From now on until Christmas, the days will seem to get shorter and shorter and the pocket books thinner and thinner.

Business will be good from now until election, four years from now, and then it will be better for four years more.

Roosevelt is to visit the St. Louis exhibition and there are to be guards without number to protect his person.

That storm which swept down the Atlantic coast left many a sailor's home desolate.

Small boys and footballs are making the world ring these cool afternoons.

Now election is over why not get together and boom Janesville?

Even living in New York has its disadvantages.

Why not have Janesville in a state league?

The prohibition vote was encouraging.

STATE FAIR HAS NICE SURPLUS.

Board of Agriculture Never Did So Well Before—The Secretary's Report.

Secretary John M. True of the state board of agriculture has completed the annual financial statement of the board, showing that although the last fair held in Milwaukee the first week of September was the most expensive of any fair given under the auspices of the Wisconsin board the plan was successful.

The board has paid all the expenses of the fair and has some $7,000 in cash on hand more than a year ago. It was expected that more tickets to the fair would be sold by the railroad companies with the excursion tickets to Milwaukee. It is believed that many people coming from distant places in the state to the fair bought the regular railroad excursion tickets to Milwaukee and preferred to wait and buy their entrance tickets at the gates of the fair grounds.

The board has on hand a balance of $23,857.66. The total disbursements since January 1, 1904, were $61,982.52. The aggregate of the receipts was $85,840.18, made up of the following items:

The Irish World.

The Irish World, published by Patrick Ford, New York, has been a staunch supporter of republicanism and protection during the past 20 years. The paper was loyal to the party during the late campaign and did effective work. It has a wide influence among a constituency which is naturally democratic and the paper has been instrumental in converting many voters to the faith which it so ably defends. The republican press of the country as well as the party appreciates the work done by the "World."

MUCH IS DOING AT THE SMOKER.

Golf Club Members Anxiously Await Tuesday Night of Next Week.

Unless present, indications fail the coming smoker at the Sinnissippi Golf club promises to eclipse any previous attempt of the gentlemen of the club to have a genuine good time. A. M. Valentine has charge of the evening's entertainment and he promises lots of good cheer of both wit and "fillings" for the inner man. J. P. Batter is custodian of the funds for the occasion and he is anxiously waiting for the dollar from each member who has not yet paid. It is in a way necessary for each member to state definitely whether he will be present or not and deposit his dollar. This is due to the fact that if more come than were expected there will be plenty of the "whereabouts" ready to greet them. The committee has arranged for buses to meet the cars and then bring downtown those who stay later than the last car. There will be plenty of room for all to ride without crowding.

ARGUED QUESTION OF THE OPEN DOOR

ALLEY MATTER UP BEFORE COUNCIL AGAIN.

TO REMAIN PRIVATE PROPERTY

Council, Appalled by Promised Litigation, Left Settlement to Alderman from the Third.

Over the question of making the private alley running in the rear of the Hayes block and the stores fronting on South Main street, from Milwaukee to Court, a public thoroughfare, another stirring argument on the part of those interested was held before the city council last evening. The aldermen caucused on the question outside of the council chamber and decided to take no action on the matter, leaving it to the 3d ward aldermen and the property owners for settlement. From present indications the Rock County Telephone Co. will have to settle with the property owners or remove its underground cable system which is at present located in this private road.

Francis Grant Talks

Francis Grant said that he represented the Rock County Telephone Co. and acknowledged that the company was much interested in having the alley made a public thoroughfare on account of its underground cables. The movement was inaugurated, however, on the ground that the city needed this alley for fire protection, and Chief Klein endorsed it. The petition to have it opened was signed by five-sixths of the owners of property fronting on the alley. The Telephone Co., he said, had put its cables there because it was thought better to run them underground than outside on poles. Recently the company had been ordered out with the proviso that they might stay on the payment of an exorbitant rental. While to all intents and purposes it was a public thoroughfare, in reality it was not one owing to the fact that Messrs. Jenkins and Conrad and the Lappin estate had periodically closed it. If compelled to leave the telephone Co. would have to run down South Main street on poles. It was not compelled to place its wires underground. The wire or cable had been repeated and there would probably not be another put in force for fifteen years. The estimated cost of removing the wires and going down South Main street was $2,500.

Call It a Hold-up

The Telephone Co. was a small concern capitalized at $50,000. It was fighting a powerful corporation which was now giving telephones here for $1.50 while it charged $5 in Beloit. While the independent company had paid dividends of 10 percent, the stockholders had never been in any easy frame of mind since their investment. A sleet storm at any time might compel them to lose the small dividend and pocket a loss in addition. The reasons advanced for taking no action regarding this alley consisted in the proposition that the alley was open and no one was inclined to close it. But the argument of the men who had closed it periodically was that they could do so permanently if they so desired. If anyone should ever attempt to build across this private thoroughfare, acting within his present rights, it would cost the city much more to convert it into a public thoroughfare than it would at this time. Mr. R. M. Hostick had said that he wouldn't have the alley closed for $5,000, and he wouldn't have it a public thoroughfare for the same sum. He wanted a rental of $10 a year from the Telephone Co. for passing his property. Such a permanent rental was good interest on a $1,000 investment and if the company had to pay in the same proportion for its entire right of way the cost would be prohibitive. It looked like a hold-up. It had been stated that this move was one to save the Telephone Co. the cost of condemning the property. The Telephone Co. could not condemn private property. If it were made a public ally the company could condemn and property-holders could make complaint and secure damages. He was authorized to say that the Telephone Co. would pay $250 towards the cost of opening the alley.

Key to the Situation

E. F. Carpenter, Jr., for the Lappin estate, which he said with W. B. Conrad held the key to the situation, if the alley were taken by the city it would be stipulated that there should be no interference with the stone cellar-ways. It would also expect reasonable compensation. E. D. McGowan said, that it must be conceded that the alley would in all probability be kept open in the future as it had been in the past fifty years. The property-holders were offering no excuse as to how they came by the property. They had been gracious all these years and that fact was the best argument that the alley would continue to remain open. Although it might be a necessity to have it open, it did not follow that the property should be taken without compensation. A corporation paying 10 percent, that hadn't paid a dollar for the use of the streets, was asking the council to take private property for private purposes. The Telephone Co. had never been asked to pay for their privilege before and there might have been some circumstances of late that had given rise to this request. The property-holders were willing to give the city the right to use the alley for fire purposes in any way which it might see fit. Before the council could condemn private property it must have some well defined purpose and reason for so doing.

William Riger, Jr., Spoke

Attorney William Riger, Jr., spoke in behalf of Mr. Conrad. He said that the latter would execute a bond to the city that he would keep his portion of the alley open. In taking any action in this matter the council would first have to determine whether or not the alley was to be condemned for public purposes. The decision of the council as to the necessity of such action would not be final. The proceeding would have to go before a county judge and jury, then probably on appeal to the circuit.

RATHER SLIM AUDIENCE AT SHOW LAST EVENING.

"In the Far East" failed to attract a large number of theatergoers.

At the Myers opera house last evening only a small audience greeted the production of the play entitled "In the Far East" under the management of Hopkins and Hampton. The make up of the different players was excellent, the scenery was finer than usual and the leading charmers took their parts well, but the mistakes of the poorly drilled "supes" nearly spoiled the rest. Every action or move meant to thwart the Russians whose plots were portrayed in the play was received with applause while hisses could be heard for Captain Kranstroff of Kuropatkin's staff several times. The decided stand taken by Council Miller of the United States was also well received.

COUNTY NEWS

MILTON.

Milton, Nov. 14.—This community was greatly shocked when it became known about 1 o'clock Saturday that Farin E. Osborn had committed suicide by hanging himself in the loft of his barn. Mr. Osborn was seventy-seven years of age and had been a resident of this village for fifteen years, having resided on a farm in the town of Harmony for many years prior to coming to this place. He had the respect and esteem of every one with whom he was acquainted. A year ago Sept. 1 he buried his first wife and in the following month went to California where he spent the winter, returning in May. Just a month prior to his death he was married to Mrs. Margaret Cary, of Janesville, who, with a large circle of relatives and friends, are left to mourn his loss. A coroner's jury consisting of J. C. Goodrich, D. Y. Berkalev, J. P. Bullis, M. Sayer, D. McCulloch and O. D. Crumb, was impanelled by Justice Tarpley and their verdict was that deceased came to his death by strangulation caused by hanging at his own hands. The funeral services were held today at 10 o'clock at the church in North Johnston, where the burial was made. Rev. L. S. Jones, assisted by Rev. A. L. McClelland, officiated.

The call for a day of prayer by the National W. C. T. U. will be observed by the Milton and Harmony unions in a meeting Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 23, in the parlors of the M. E. Church. A cordial invitation is extended to all others to attend and participate.

The ladies of Milton will serve a Thanksgiving dinner in the parlors of the Seventh-day Baptist church and the income thereof will be devoted to the Whitford Hall building fund. An opportunity to get a fine dinner and help a worthy object.

The college and academy basket ball teams played their first game Thursday evening at the gym. It was a brisk affair and the academy won by a score of 21 to 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn T. Smith, who were married Wednesday, are now residents of this village and our citizens unite in tendering their congratulations and best wishes. The bride, who was Miss Kennedy, has been an attendant in the county asylum for some time.

Russell Davidson, of Beloit, spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cary and Emery Cary and wife, of North Johnston, were with Milton relatives Sunday.

Mrs. L. H. Belknap is visiting her mother, Mrs. E. M. Dunn.

Miss Julia Royce, of Whitewater, is spending several days at W. R. Celstrand's.

A. P. Rice and wife, of Fulton, were in town Wednesday.

Postoffice Inspector Maher, of Chicago, was in town Saturday.

B. I. Jeffrey, of Albion, has rented the Ballard house and will make this village his home. The young couple will visit Minneapolis, St. Paul and Waterloo, Iowa, before returning to Rockford where they will make their home. We extend congratulations and best wishes to the young couple for many years of happiness.

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

Sam's New York Triumphs.
Ignoring his mother's protest, Sam employed a dressmaker and for two weeks Mrs. Rounds found pleasure in assisting the seamstress with her work. Sam had acquiesced in the letter with his secret and she agreed to protect it. But his precautions were in vain.

Like other crimes less difficult to condone, this one was destined to be revealed. The preacher's wife called on Mrs. Rounds, and since they had become very friendly, was shown the new gown and the black lace shawl. Whatever of envy arose in that good woman's breast was lost in surprise when Mrs. Rounds innocently mentioned the price she had paid for the silk!

"Sixty-five cents a yard for that silk!" she exclaimed. "Why, my dear Mrs. Rounds, you surely must be jesting. I had a dress like that when I was married, and it cost six dollars a yard. And that lace at thirty cents. It surely cost five dollars a yard, and perhaps more. That beautiful shawl must have cost more than a hundred dollars. I understand now," she continued in some confusion. "Your son intended to surprise you. It was very good of him and very clumsy in me to reveal his secret."

When the visitor had departed Mrs. Rounds looked with awe at the garments spread out before her. A familiar step sounded in the hallway, and Sam entered, his homely face rosy with a smile.

"I'm back again," he said, fondly embracing his mother. "Admirin' yer new gown, eh? Go an' put it on, an' yer bonnet an' shawl. I want ter see how ye looks, dressed up an' real lady."

She held his hands and looked up, tears trickling down her faded cheeks.

"You—you told me an awful story, Samuel," she faltered. "but—but I don't think you meant to do wrong, and—and I'll pray for you. You are very good to me, Samuel, if you did break one of the commandments."

"That didn't break no commandment," said Sam with a contrite grin. "It only kinda bent it a little. Don't ye worry about ther cost of them clothea. I've made enough money since I've been away ter pay for three more dresses like that all-one. It's none ter good for ye, an' I want ye to wear it just as if yo wa'n't afraid of it."

Sam's rapidly increasing business kept him away from home much of the time. Mrs. Rounds was busy for a month with her wardrobe. She then knitted socks for Sam, until he had a supply sufficient to last a lifetime. In this crisis of a dearth of work, the wife of a neighbor was taken ill with typhoid fever. There were five small children in the family, and they were too poor to employ a nurse.

An hour after Mrs. Rounds heard the news she had taken charge of the case. Hour after hour and day after day she fought the attacks of the insidious disease. She cooked the meals, soothed the crying children, spoke words of comfort to the distressed husband, performed the housework, and slept at such rare intervals as she could find between her multitudinous duties. The patient was convalescent, when Sam returned home. He at once employed a nurse to take his mother's place.

She listened patiently and with a puzzled smile to Sam's rebuking lecture.

what's up, old boy? Seen a bear. Don't bother with him—let him alone. Go away, Dog, I'm busy," and Blake returned to his task.

Leaning back against the wall of the tunnel, with his paws hanging in a most doleful fashion, the dog sounded a long-drawn wail, so pitiful in its intensity that Blake dropped his pick and gazed at the animal in amazement mixed with terror. The animal sprang forward and fastened his teeth in the leg of Blake's trousers, pulling gently but firmly, growling and whining.

"This is a new freak!" muttered Blake, grabbing the lantern. "Something has happened. Perhaps the but's afire."

He moved quickly towards the mouth of the tunnel. The dog gave a joyful bark, and led the way. Blake reached the open air, and floundered through the drifts until the cabin was visible through the blinding snow. The dog went past it, and howled dismally when his master paused. Rushing into the hut, Blake secured his mother as mistress of the establishment. His business prospered. Having firmly established his position as a shipper and dealer in horses, he turned his attention to the commission business. Taking advantage of a shortage in the cranberry crop, he bought a large part of the available supply and cleared thousands of dollars in consequence of his sagacity. He then embarked in the produce and commission business on a large scale and scored another success.

At the age of thirty-five, having amassed a competency, Sam Rounds determined to "improve what he termed his "book education." Four winter terms in the Rehoboth public school gave him all of which he could boast in the way of erudition. He therefore began a course of study in a night school, which he attended four evenings in the week. He joined a debating society, and became a member of various social and political organizations in its district.

The corruption of the local politicians precipitated a revolt against the party in power, and the voters of Sam's district held a meeting for the purpose of nominating an alderman to stand against an incumbent who had betrayed his trust. Sam's name was proposed with cheers. He was nominated by acclamation and escorted to the platform.

"If honesty is good policy in business, as they say it is," he declared, "it should be a good thing in politics. Those who know me know that I'm not a politician, and those that don't know me will mighty soon find it out. The only promise I can make is that if I am elected—and I calculate to be—is that I would no sooner think of cheating my neighbors as an alderman, than I would of cheating them in selling potatoes or cabbages."

Samuel Lemuel Rounds was triumphantly elected alderman by the largest majority ever cast for a candidate in his district.

CHAPTER XII.

Lost in the Snow.

Looks like more snow!

At the sound of his master's voice a shepherd dog raised his head inquiringly, and followed the gaze of the speaker as he studied the leaden sky and the crests of snowclad ridges and mountains. This habit of voicing thought develops in those who spend long periods in solitude, and James Blake—once a farmer boy in Hingham, and now a California gold miner and prospector—was no exception to the rule.

"Let's get breakfast, Dog," he said as he entered the cabin. "I told you it was going to snow."

Blake's cabin stood well back from the edge of a cliff half way up the slope of a valley in the Sierra Nevada of Central California.

Scattered along the walls were mining tools, powder kegs, guns, fishing rods, and a miscellaneous assortment of lumber and firewood. A small but strongly constructed ell was used as a storeroom; haunches of venison, the carcass of a brown bear, and long strings of mountain trout were here securely guarded against the depredations of wandering animals. Bags of flour and oatmeal, some potatoes, sides of bacon, and the remnants of a ham completed the more substantial portion of Blake's larder. He often surveyed his snug storeroom with much satisfaction. Nothing but a conflagration or a serious illness could disturb his labors during the long winter season.

Breakfast ended, James Blake lit his pipe and started for the mouth of the tunnel. Though less than an hour had passed since he entered the cabin the snow already had drifted across the path and blocked the door. Those whose knowledge of snowstorms is confined to localities where a foot or two of snow in forty-eight hours is called a "blizzard," and esteemed a meteorological event, have no conception of a snow storm in the Sierras. Near the timber line in the Sierra Nevada there has been recorded a fall of fourteen feet of snow in as many consecutive hours—an inch every five minutes—a swirling, writhing, choking maelstrom of flakes, borne on the wings of a freezing gale.

It was such a storm that Blake faced when he opened the cabin door and plunged through the drifts into the tunnel.

"This is an old sniffer, isn't it, Dog?" he exclaimed as he stood in the mouth of the shaft and shook the snow from his blouse.

Blake lit a lantern and wormed his way into the dismal hole. A few minutes later he was hard at work, pausing now and then to examine the rock with eager eyes. He had been toiling for three hours or more when the dog's sniffling attracted his notice. As he turned, the animal raised his head, barked sharply, and growled in a peculiar manner.

"What's the matter, Dog?" said Blake, patting his friend. "What a cursed shame the creature can't talk!"

ARGUED QUESTION

court, and after that to the supreme court. If, after passing through the courts, it should be decided that the condemnation of this private property was necessary, a large expense to the city would be incurred. J. M. Bostwick spoke in favor of making the thoroughfare a public alley, stating that he had 121 feet frontage and that he would gladly have the alley opened without cost to the city.

"This is a new freak!" muttered Blake, grabbing the lantern. "Something has happened. Perhaps the but's afire."

He moved quickly towards the mouth of the tunnel. The dog gave a joyful bark, and led the way. Blake reached the open air, and floundered through the drifts until the cabin was visible through the blinding snow. The dog went past it, and howled dismally when his master paused. Rushing into the hut, Blake secured his mother as mistress of the establishment. His business prospered. Having firmly established his position as a shipper and dealer in horses, he turned his attention to the commission business. Taking advantage of a shortage in the cranberry crop, he bought a large part of the available supply and cleared thousands of dollars in consequence of his sagacity. He then embarked in the produce and commission business on a large scale and scored another success.

Three hundred Kent corn planters are being manufactured every day at the plant on North Main street now and it is expected that three thousand will be made during the season. Ten men are engaged in the work and they expect to have finished all that will be made this year by next February. Instead of closing the factory until next fall when work will be started on the planter for the next season Mr. MacLean has secured the right to manufacture a patent bed spring during the spring and summer months. These springs will be called the Triumph Sanitary Bed Spring and will take the place of the collared spring. The wire of which it is made is crimped and while the same resiliency is gained from the crimped as from the colling it is a great deal more sanitary, having less place for the gathering of dust. This amount of resiliency contained in the crimp of the wire utilized as the spring, and by combining such strands of crimped wire, a bed spring is obtained which is simple, smooth, pliant but possesses a wonderful amount of resiliency and strength because of the test to which each strand of wire has been subjected. The arrangement of the crimps transversely gives each strand of wire a certain amount of torsion spring, while the resiliency contained in the longitudinal arrangement of the strands gives the required longitudinal spring. A device for retuning adjacent strands in situation presents any excess of torsion in the crimps, thereby insuring a smooth surface to the springs where the body may rest supported without irregular pressure upon any portion, as much as the spring conforms completely to the contour of the body. It is this smooth property of the spring surface, aided by the great strength and resiliency of a spring derived of all slack, which is the best feature of the patent. And any small thickness of cover, the thickness of one of two ordinary comforts, is sufficient to protect the skin from contact of the wire so that a mattress is altogether superfluous. This is not only a boon to hospitals where mattresses should not be used because of them being so unhygienic but also to all people.

The New Englander is not demonstrative in his emotions or affections, but the joy which danced in the eyes of these reunited friends as they shook hands and slapped each other on the back was more eloquent than words.

"This seems too good to be true, Jim!" exclaimed John, his hand on Jim's shoulder. "But for you, old chum, my California experience would have been ended. How small the world is, that we should meet here, all places on earth!"

"Take of your clothes and get into bed, John," directed Blake, as he pushed John into a chair and tugged at his frozen boots. "Do as I tell you and you'll be all right. Lie quiet and rest. Don't talk, but keep awake."

Several times, during the next two hours, John fell into a drowse, but by force of will he roused himself. The reaction after the awful struggle in the drifts was severe, but he mastered it and was himself again. Blake exhausted the resources of his larder in a dinner, which John enjoyed as never before in his life, and Dog did not go hungry.

Then pipes were produced, and seated near the red-hot stove, the two friends recounted some of the events which had marked their lives during the preceding six years. It seemed ages to both of them. The striplings of seventeen were now stalwart men. Blake listened eagerly to his friend's recital of the events leading up to the quarrel with Arthur Morris. Jim clenched his hands and leaned excitedly forward when John told of the struggle with Morris in the tavern.

"I have sometimes thought," said John, "that I should have remained and faced the charge of murder which might have been made against me. That was my first impulse. I did not kill Morris, and it is only by chance that he did not kill me. The revolver was still in his hand when he fell, though I had bent his wrist so that he could not turn it against me. It was one of those new self-cocking weapons and Morris shot himself. But I had no witnesses, and Grandfather Burt and others advised me to put myself beyond the reach of a prosecution in which all the money and influence would have been against me. But tell me of yourself, Jim. What have you done in California, and what has the Golden State done for you?"

SAFELY THROUGH MOTHERHOOD WITHOUT PAIN.

What a wonderful message of hope and escape from suffering these words carry to that woman who is dreading the hour that shall proclaim her Motherhood. Perhaps for her it is the first time God has blessed her with such a great mystery and fear she contemplates the coming before in the way of many painful discomforts? The hope held out to these words and means that children have a natural and painless birth giving and joy, stripped of its agonies and dangers because of the learned skill of man.

TWO KINDS OF IMMEDIATE SERVICE CLOTHES

OURS and the Ordinary Ready Made

The winter fashions here in Suits show a leaning towards the warm Browns and Grays, mostly in rich mixtures. The Ziegler-styles give a little more roominess in the shoulders and breadth in the lapels and collars and length in the perpendicular. The winter styles in Overcoats in 12 different models, mark the highest development in tailoring skill. Many men are wearing our Overcoats this fall, having taken advantage of our former offerings. We shall again give you a chance for tomorrow and the balance of this week--a special offering of 10 per cent from the price of any Overcoat in the store. All goods marked in plain selling price.

We have a very complete line of Overcoats in the Belt, Ruton, Box, Long Sack, Ulster and many other styles which we have been offering at $15.00, and at a reduction of 10 per cent or $1.50 off the regular price, you buy the best Overcoat in Janesville for the price. We especially call your attention to this line of Overcoats and want you to look at them.

IN OUR BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

We hope to make a friend of every boy who reads the AMERICAN BOY, and we surely will of every boy who buys our clothes. We propose to have every boy in Janesville know how Boys' Clothes should be made and the kind of materials which should be put in them always, and the right place to get the right kind of clothes. We have got a big lot of them now coming our way, and we are going to get more.

Our offer of the "American Boy" Magazine--a free 6 months subscription to every boy whose purchase is $4.00 or more in our Boys' and Children's Department, brings a pleasant acquaintance and a mutual understanding between us and the boy who wears our clothes and the parent who pays the bills.

Our Big Leader Values Are Our $5.00 Suits and Overcoats.

Big boys are wearing the Norfolk with Knickerbockers or plain trousers.

Small boys are wearing the dainty novelties in the Eton Sailors trimmed with braid and soutache.

There is an Eton collar of the same material attached, while an extra collar of starched white linen and a soft black tie are furnished with each suit.

Small Overcoat wearers and their mothers will be delighted with our Russian or Gossack Coat worn by the baby boy of four and up to the age of 8 years.

Old Sails of fourteen years or small sailor men of five, can be fitted with our "Naval Reefer," a short, loose, warm little coat that is good to look at and good to wear. The biggest line of $5.00 Suits and Overcoats in Janesville can be seen here.

The November Number of the "American Boy" is here. It tells how to do things--make boats, take pictures, fit up a gymnasium and do other things which interest and profit a boy. The most discerning parent will at once see the pleasure to be derived from its pages. We have made special arrangements with the publishers by which we can give this Magazine free to our boy customers.

To any boy in Janesville who has not taken advantage of our offer and who would like to know something about this great Magazine we shall be pleased to present a copy if he will call here and register his name.

E. J. SMITH, Manager

BORT, BAILEY & CO.

THERE are several thousand people in this vicinity who know that we are selling first-class Dry Goods very cheap.

There are several thousand others that have not yet tried to find out about it. You heedless ones, you skeptical ones, you are the ones we want to interest.

Will You Make a Fair Test?

You may find it quite interesting, and possibly profitable as well. This is the test we ask you to try and try it fairly: Make a list of a dozen staple Dry Goods items, something that you know is carried in all good dry goods stores; ascertain the price that other stores ask, and then find out our prices on the same items. You can get at it any way you please. But however you get at it, be sure you go right to the bottom of the test and do it fair and right. We will beat them on four items out of five. We know it and you ought to know it.

For Wednesday, Nov. 16th, we will, in addition to the uniform low prices in every department, make the following special offers:
